

The above chart shows the CLABSI rate for adult patients seen in the ambulatory setting. The lower control limit (LCL) and the upper control limit (UCL) are calculations used by Dana-Farber to measure if the CLABSI rates are in fact changing in a way that we should pay close attention to. Any values outside the range prompt investigation to determine special causes for high or low rates.